

David Bradbury MP

Minister for Veterans' Affairs

Member for Lindsay

David has lived in Western Sydney all his life. He lives in Claremont Meadows, in the heart of the Lindsay electorate, with his wife Kylie and four young children.

David is a graduate of the University of Sydney, holding an Arts Degree and an Honours Degree in Law. He has also undertaken postgraduate studies in taxation law.

Before his entry to the parliament Parliament, David was a Senior Associate practising taxation law with the corporate law firm Blake Dawson.

David served as a councillor on Penrith City Council for nine years, and was twice elected Mayor of the City of Penrith.

From 2007-10, David was chair of the Caucus Economics Committee and a member of the House of Representatives Economics Committee, the House of Representatives Communications Committee and the Joint Public Accounts and Audit Committee.

Following the 2010 election, David was appointed as the Parliamentary Secretary to the Treasurer.

In the March 2012 reshuffle, David was promoted to the Ministry as Assistant Treasurer, and in the newly-created position of Minister Assisting for Deregulation.
