

Federal Election Results

12 September 2013

On 7 September 2013 the Liberal-National Coalition was elected to form government, having achieved a majority of seats in the House of Representatives. As a result the former Opposition Leader, the Hon. Tony Abbott MP, will now become Australia’s 28th Prime Minister. The Coalition is yet to announce its Ministry.

The Australian Federal Parliamentary Labor Party is set to determine its leadership in the coming week, with the Shadow Ministry to be announced shortly thereafter, dependent on the progress of the count. The Hawker Britton Occasional Paper on the changes made on 22 July 2013 to the way leaders of the Australian Parliamentary Labor Party are elected is available here.

This paper is intended as an update on the outcome of the Federal election of 7 September 2013. It should be noted that the outcome of each House of Representatives and Senate election is not declared until the result is beyond doubt.

I. House of Representatives election results

As at 12 noon on 12 September, the Australian Electoral Commission is (AEC) is predicting that the Coalition will secure 91 seats with a current two-party count of 53.18 per cent. This represents an 18 seat gain so far on the 2010 result of 73 seats. The Australian Labor Party is likely to retain 54 seats with 46.82 per cent of the vote, which represents an 18 seat loss on the 2010 result of 72 seats.

As the results are still being finalised, clicking the name of each electorate below will link to the updated AEC results when and as they come in.

II. Senate Results

The count for Senate is continuing. As at 12 September, the AEC is predicting the following result:

Party	Continuing	New	Total
Liberal/National Party/CLP	16	18	34
Australian Labor Party	13	12	25
Australian Greens	6	4	10
Democratic Labour Party	1	0	1
Others	0	6	6

This could change as the count progresses. A Hawker Britton Occasional Paper on the final results of the Senate election will be released when the results are finalised. The most up-to-date count is available on the AEC website here.

Senators representing the states are normally elected for fixed terms of six years, commencing on 1 July following the election, and ceasing on 30 June six years later. As such, the senators elected at the 2013 Federal election will not commence their terms until 1 July 2014.

The term of the four senators from the territories is not fixed, rather defined by the date of the general House of Representatives election. Senators representing the territories commence their terms on the day that they are elected and their terms expire the day prior to the next general election day.

For information on the date of the next Federal election, see the Hawker Britton Occasional Paper on forthcoming Australian elections available here.

New Territory Senators

Two new senators were elected to represent the territories at the 2013 Federal election: Nova Peris (ALP) and Zed Seselja (LIB). These senators' terms commence immediately.

i. Sen. Nova Peris OAM

ALP Senator for the Northern Territory

Sen. Peris is a traditional owner/descendent of and identifies with the Kiga People of the East Kimberley, Yawuru People of the West Kimberley and Muran People of West Arnhem land NT. She was the first Indigenous Australian, and first Territorian, to win a Gold Medal at the Olympics. Sen. Peris has been a National Ambassador for Reconciliation Australia, International Ambassador for the World Health Organisation, and an International Indigenous Rights Ambassador.

ii. Sen. Zed Seselja

Liberal Senator for the Australian Capital Territory

Sen. Seselja was a member of the Australian Capital Territory Legislative Assembly from 2004 to 2013, serving as Opposition Leader from December 2007 to January 2013. On 4 February 2013 he announced he would be challenging sitting Senator Gary Humphries. On 23 February 2013 he won his pre-selection battle, and becoming one of the two official Liberal Party Senate candidates for the ACT

New State Senators

Two new senators were appointed shortly before the 2013 Federal election. Their terms commence immediately.

i. Sen. Sam Dastyari

ALP Senator for New South Wales

Sen. Dastyari is the former General Secretary of the New South Wales branch of the Australian Labor Party. Sen. Dastyari was appointed at a joint sitting of the Parliament of New South Wales on 21 August 2013. Sen. Dastyari filled the Senate seat vacated by former Sen. Thistlethwaite, who had resigned on 9 August to contest the House of Representatives seat of Kingsford Smith at the 2013 Federal election. Sen. Dastyari's term expires in July 2017.

ii. Sen. Mehmet Tillem

ALP Senator for Victoria

Sen. Tillem was appointed to Sen. Feeney's former seat by a joint sitting of the Parliament of Victoria on 21 August 2013. He is the first Turkish-born member of the Australian parliament. As Sen. Feeney's term was to expire on 30 June 2014, Sen. Tillem was a Senate candidate in the 2013 federal election. The count for Senate is continuing. A Hawker Britton Occasional Paper on the final results of the Senate election will be released when the results are finalised.

iii. Resignation of Sen. Barnaby Joyce

Former Sen. Joyce resigned his senate seat on 8 August 2013 to contest the House of Representatives seat of New England at the Federal election. The AEC predicts that he won the seat for the Nationals and is now on a margin of 21.1 per cent. The LNP's Barry O'Sullivan is set to be formally nominated as Barnaby Joyce's replacement in the Senate later today. He will then be appointed by the Parliament of Queensland when it next sits on October 15.

III. Legislative agenda of the 44th Parliament

Until 1 July 2014 the balance of power in the Senate remains with The Australian Greens. The Coalition holds 34 senate seats and the Australian Labor Party holds 31 senate seats. Without the support of the 9 Greens senators, neither party can command the 39 votes needed to pass legislation or to support motions.

The incoming Coalition government has indicated the first legislative act will be to introduce legislation to repeal the carbon tax. Another priority for the incoming government is the repeal of the Minerals Rent Resource Tax. These reforms will need the support of either the Australian Labor Party or The Greens in order to pass through the Senate.

Prime Minister-elect Tony Abbott and former shadow ministers have made it clear that they are prepared to call a double dissolution election if the Senate rejects their legislation.
